AFC East Division Preview

Buffalo Bills

Buffalo focused on the defensive side of the ball in the draft, selecting two cornerbacks, two nose tackles, and an edge rusher in their first five picks. Kentucky's Maxwell Hairston was the team's first-rounder (30th overall), but unless all of these rookies pan out, the Bills' defense still remains suspect, even with veteran Joey Bosa signed to a one-year deal.

However, Josh Allen is the reigning MVP, and he will be throwing laser beams throughout the season. Should second-year man Keon Coleman make a quantum leap from an underwhelming rookie season, it would be a boon to an offense that boasts Khalil Shakir and a steamroller out of the backfield in James Cook, who garnered over 1000 yards rushing and 16 touchdowns last year.

Best Bet: Under 11 ½ (+110) Regular Season Wins

New York Jets

The Bears' 11th overall pick in 2021, Justin Fields, will need to have a Lazarus-like season to resurrect his thus far underwhelming career. But he's getting a shot as the Jets' full-time starter under center, and some NFL pundits believe he now has the maturity and poise to surprise the naysayers this season.

The Jets did the right thing by selecting Missouri tackle Armand Membou to protect Fields and then plucked a solid tight end in the second round by drafting LSU's Mason Taylor. The secondary needs help, and they attempted to add depth by drafting FSU cornerback Azareye'h Thomas (3rd round) and Alabama safety Malachi Moore (4th round).

However, nothing about this team screams playoff contender, and it will likely be another season of futility for fans of Gang Green.

Best Bet: Under 5 ½ (+120) Regular Season Wins

Miami Dolphins

As Tua Tagovailoa goes, so go the Miami Dolphins. The 27-year-old has a history of concussions and assorted ailments, which means it is always a dicey proposition to predict big things for the Fish. A welcome addition to protect the franchise came in the form of second-round pick Jonah Savaiinaea of Arizona, who will step in for the departed Robert Jones at guard. However, the retirement of 5x Pro Bowl tackle Terron Armstead creates a void impossible to fill.

The Dolphins still have a dynamic duo with Tyreek Hill and Jaylen Waddle on the wings and boast De'Von Achane in the backfield. That's plenty of firepower, and if tight end Jonnu Smith can have something resembling the career year he had in 2024, this offense will once again be electric, assuming Tua stays healthy.

Best Bet: Under 8 ½ (-155) Regular Season Wins

New England Patriots

After another disastrous season in New England, it appears the Patriots finally have a bona fide stud under center in Drake Maye. But an alarming lack of protection could not prevent the Pats' offense from sputtering in 2024. However, New England chose the best offensive tackle in the draft, LSU's Will Campbell, with the No. 4 overall pick, which should give Maye more time in the pocket.

It should also be noted that a fan favorite is back in Foxboro, Mike Vrabel, taking over for the one-hit but not-so-wondrous Jerod Mayo as head coach. Vrabel has added depth to the receiving corps with veterans Stefon Diggs and Mack Hollins, as well as a third-round speed burner in Kyle Williams of Washington State.

Best Bet: Over 7 ½ (-140) Regular Season Wins

AFC West Division Preview

Kansas City Chiefs

Everyone outside of Kansas City is waiting for the Chiefs to collapse, but Patrick Mahomes is that one-of-a-kind generational talent who can overcome his team's offensive deficiencies and still win it all. But this year, Mahomes will be without stalwart guard Joe Thuney, who was dealt to the Bears for a fourth-round pick.

However, if the Chiefs' first-round pick, Ohio State tackle Josh Simmons, can rebound from a serious knee injury, he could be instrumental in giving Mahomes more time in the pocket this season. The second and third round picks were spent on bolstering their defensive line with Tennessee's Norman-Lott and Louisville edge rusher Ashton Gillotte.

The Chiefs still have questions on offense with Rashee Rice returning from a ligament tear in his knee that kept him sidelined most of his sophomore season. Second-year man Xavier Worthy is a flash of lightning and a puff of smoke, arguably the fastest man in the league.

Yet, aside from him, Mahomes' options will be limited if Father Time catches up to Travis Kelce and Rice doesn't resemble his rookie self.

Best Bet: Under 11 ½ (-130) Regular Season Wins

Los Angeles Chargers

The Bolts desperately needed an infusion of talent in the trenches on both sides of the ball, as well as a shiny new target for Justin Herbert to play catch with wouldn't have been a bad idea either in the opening round. However, the Chargers passed on all of those choices by selecting North Carolina running back Omarion Hampton at No. 22 overall, after recently signing former Steelers tailback Najee Harris.

Nevertheless, there was a bit of redemption in store as Ole Miss receiver Tre Harris was the team's second-round pick, who should serve as a fine complement to Ladd McConkey, their breakout star last year. Wideout KeAndre Lambert-Smith of Auburn was a steal in the fifth round following LA's third and fourth picks addressing the defensive line.

Best Bet: Over 9 ½ (-105) Regular Season Wins

Denver Broncos

Bo Nix enjoyed an impressive rookie campaign, and Denver fans are hoping his ascension continues in his sophomore season. The Broncos ended with a 10-7 record but were bounced by the Bills in the first round of the playoffs.

However, this season, bigger and better things are expected, but instead of adding to Nix's arsenal, the Broncos took one of the best cornerbacks in college football, Jahdae Barron of Texas, in the opening round, who will be teamed with the reigning Defensive Player of the Year, Pat Surtain II.

Yet, it wasn't long before offensive help was on the way, as UCF's RJ Harvey was plucked in the second round, giving the Broncos a multi-purpose option in the backfield. Illinois wideout Pat Bryant, taken in the third round, will give Nix a big target at 6'3" and 205 pounds.

Solid additions through free agency and a decent draft should make believers out of everyone, with Denver challenging as an AFC West title contender.

Best Bet: Over 9 ½ (+100) Regular Season Wins

Las Vegas Raiders

The Raiders were a hot mess last season, mired in the muck of the AFC West basement, but they did snag the best running back in the draft when they selected Boise State's Ashton Jeanty with the No. 6 overall pick. However, this team had too many holes to plug not to trade down and gather draft collateral.

Veteran Geno Smith should be an improvement over the middling platoon they had at quarterback last year when Gardner Minshew, Aidan O'Connell, and Desmond Ridder played musical chairs under center.

But outside of tight end Brock Bowers, there's not a lot of excitement to be had in this year's roster, and a marked improvement from their four-win season in 2024 is unlikely.

Best Bet: Under 7 ½ (-145) Regular Season Wins

AFC South Division Preview

Jacksonville Jaguars

Give the Jags' front office credit. They saw the man they coveted and traded up to get him when they took Travis Hunter at No. 2 overall in the draft. It's tough to criticize that selection, as Hunter has been described as a generational talent, ala Deion Sanders, his coach at Colorado, who played offense and defense, just as Hunter is hoping to do.

But one man does not a football team make, especially when he doesn't play quarterback, and the most alarming decision was failing to bolster the offensive line that has been shredded over the last few seasons. Trevor Lawrence has taken the brunt of the punishment, but hopefully, the team's third-round draft pick, West Virginia's mammoth tackle, Wyatt Milum, will help plug one of those holes on the offensive line.

Best Bet: Under 7 ½ (-105) Regular Season Wins

Tennessee Titans

The Titans needed a franchise quarterback, but whether or not they found one with the first overall pick in Miami's Cam Ward is anyone's guess. But what they did get is college football's best quarterback in a rather lackluster class.

Ward's success will depend on how much protection he can get, but the Titans have been so defensively porous that they had to address that concern early in the draft, which they did by choosing UCLA edge rusher Oluwafemi Oladejo in the second round, followed by the steal of the draft in the third round when they snagged Penn State safety Kevin Winston Jr.

In the fourth round, it was all offense, beginning with a 4.3 speed merchant, Chimere Dike of Florida, followed by Texas tight end Gunnar Helm, and lastly another wideout in Stanford's Elic Ayomanor. The season win total looks a bit low, so take advantage of what should be a surprisingly plucky Titans team this season.

Best Bet: Over 5 ½ (-120) Regular Season Wins

Indianapolis Colts

The enigmatic Anthony Richardson will return for a second season under center for the Colts, with another young veteran, Daniel Jones, looking to resurrect his once promising career. It's a complete roll of the dice in trying to determine what lies ahead for Indianapolis this season, so tread cautiously.

However, they did select the best tight end in the draft when they plucked Penn State's Tyler Warren at No. 14, followed by another steal in the second round when Ohio State edge rusher J.T. Tuimoloau fell to them as well. Overall, the Colts had an excellent draft, but every team needs a capable quarterback, and it's uncertain if Indianapolis has one on their roster.

Best Bet: Under 7 ½ (-115) Regular Season Wins

Houston Texans

What a difference a quarterback can make. Houston was mired in the muck of the AFC South basement in 2022 before drafting C.J. Stroud to resurrect the franchise. And just like that, the Texans have won their division in consecutive years with Stroud under center. They are likely to craft a three-peat this season and aspire to make a deep run in the postseason.

You have to love how the Texans went all-in on getting more weapons for Stroud by drafting a pair of Iowa State Cyclone receivers, including Jayden Higgins (No. 34) and Jaylin Noel (No. 79), with massive Minnesota tackle Aionte Erserly wedged in between at No. 48.

Stroud is poised for a career year, and the Texans could be a dragon slayer in the postseason.

Best Bet: Over 9 ½ (+105) Regular Season Wins

AFC North Division Preview

Cincinnati Bengals

The Cats needed to shore up their defense in the offseason, and they certainly failed in the draft. Edge rusher and Cincinnati's No. 17 overall pick in the draft, Shemar Stewart of Texas A&M, had a grand total of 4 ½ sacks in his college career, and everyone continues to wait for his potential to be fulfilled. That was just the tip of the iceberg, as the rest of the Bengals' draft didn't get any better.

Cincinnati's offense will be electric once again as Joe Burrow has his twin terrors, Ja'Marr Chase and Tee Higgins, on the wings, which will see them doing what they did last year—score 30 or more points and still lose more games than they should due to a putrid defense.

Best Bet: Under 9 ½ (+110) Regular Season Wins

Baltimore Ravens

The Ravens have captured the AFC North title two years running, and many NFL draft gurus believe they hit the jackpot by getting pure value at No. 27 in Georgia safety Malaki Starks, who was projected as a top 10 pick on many boards.

The Ravens brass plucked another gem when they selected Marshall edge rusher Mike Green deep in the second round, whose 17 sacks last season were not enough to dissuade other teams from considering some of his off-field issues.

Lamar Jackson will be doing Lamar Jackson things, which is nothing but good news for Ravens' fans. However, Derrick Henry is another year older, and to expect him to produce the way he did last year is unreasonable. Moreover, Jackson's top two targets, Zay Flowers and Rashod Bateman, are solid, albeit unspectacular, while DeAndre Hopkins will be 33 and is not the same game-breaker he was in his glory days.

Best Bet: Under 11 ½ (-115) Regular Season Wins

Cleveland Browns

Let's give the Browns a little credit. They knew Cam Ward was already locked and loaded for Tennessee, so they traded out of the No. 2 pick and selected a stud in Michigan defensive tackle Mason Graham at No. 5 overall, who was the highest-graded interior run defender in college football last season and will be teamed with Myles Garrett on Cleveland's defensive front.

As for the quarterback situation, it's not as bad as many believe it to be, with Kenny Pickett and/or Joe Flacco serving as competent placeholders until one of the rookies, Dillon Gabriel and Shedeur Sanders, muscles their way into the starting role.

Will the Browns be good in 2025? No, but they won't be nearly as bad as the 5 ½ season win total the oddsmakers are projecting.

Best Bet: Over 5 ½ (+105) Regular Season Wins

Pittsburgh Steelers

The Steelers are hoping to rebound after what started out as a promising season that suddenly took a precipitous fall from grace when they lost their last four regular-season games before getting bounced by the Ravens in the first round of the playoffs.

This year, there will be no Russell Wilson or Justin Fields under center but rather a retread from years ago, Mason Rudolph, and a sixth-round rookie backup from Ohio State, Will Howard, while Aaron Rodgers remains a possibility.

Pittsburgh had an excellent draft if you listen to the draftniks, selecting Oregon nose tackle Derrick Harmon with the 21st overall pick before taking Iowa running back Kaleb Johnson to take over the rushing duties from the departed Najee Harris.

Pittsburgh's defense will be scary this season, and the offense is serviceable enough to warrant going over the rather modest 8 ½ season win total.

Best Bet: Over 8 ½ (+120) Regular Season Wins

NFC

NFC East Division Preview

Philadelphia Eagles

Alabama's Jihad Campbell was the Eagles' first-round selection. It's fair to say he will be a welcome addition. In the second round, they found their replacement for C.J. Gardner-Johnson in Texas' safety, Andrew Mukuba. Philadelphia's next three picks were also on the defensive side until Boston College center Drew Kendall was chosen in the fifth round.

The reigning Super Bowl champions are always a popular choice to repeat, but the Eagles are for real. The offense remains stacked with Jalen Hurts under center, Saquon Barkley back for another year, and A.J. Brown and DeVonta Smith on the wings.

What's not to like?

Best Bet: Over 11 ½ (-120) Regular Season Wins

Dallas Cowboys

With the notable exception of CeeDee Lamb, the Cowboys were a team devoid of explosive talent last season. They finished the season with Dak Prescott on the sidelines after Week 9, nursing a hamstring injury, and ended with a bitter 7-10 record.

America's Team has weaknesses all over the field, but instead of getting the top tight end in the draft at No. 12, they reached for Tyler

Booker, guard out of Alabama, who could likely have been had late in the first round or even the second round to replace the retired Zack Martin. The only steal the Cowboys got in the draft was Texas running back, Jaydon Blue, in the fifth round.

The Cowboys made a solid deal by adding former Steelers' wideout George Pickens for only a third-round pick, necessary to bolster the team's offensive arsenal. It doesn't appear Dallas is going to be much different than last season.

Best Bet: Under 7 ½ (+115) Regular Season Wins

New York Giants

Not much is expected of the Giants after another dismal 3-14 season, but they did get college football's most ferocious pass rusher in Penn State's Abdul Carter with the third overall selection. They then traded up and back into the first round to snag Old Miss quarterback Jaxson Dart, the highest-graded passer in the 2025 draft class, to be mentored by Russell Wilson and Jameis Winston.

By all accounts, the Giants had a terrific draft, and it will be interesting to see if Russell Wilson has any gas left in the tank. There's no place to go but up for Big Blue, and it is safe to say that they are at least a few games better than they were last year.

Best Bet: Over 5 ½ (+110) Regular Season Wins

Washington Commanders

Rookie signal caller Jayden Daniels put the Commanders on his back, took them to a 12-4 record, and ultimately a date with the eventual Super Bowl-winning Philadelphia Eagles in the conference championship game. How does he top that except for a Super Bowl appearance?

Expectations are through the roof in DC, which means it will be a pressure cooker all season long for Daniels' Commanders. However, the Commanders' C-suite did the young rookie a huge favor by trading for 5x Pro Bowl offensive tackle Laremy Tunsil in the offseason and then bolstering the offensive line with Oregon's Josh Conerly as their first-round pick.

Note that Daniels will be equipped with another top-tier caliber weapon at his disposal with Deebo Samuel, also acquired in the offseason. This team is better than last year's, and as long as Daniels avoids a sophomore slump, the Commanders could win it all.

Best Bet: Over 9 ½ (-120) Regular Season Wins

NFC West Division Preview

San Francisco 49ers

Although not everyone agrees that the Niners' 2025 draft class is underwhelming, there are very few who are genuinely excited about the team's 11 picks. San Francisco is poised to rebound from a 6-11 season, but how much better will they be?

Well, the Cardinals and Seahawks should be better this season, and the Rams always play the 49ers tough. Last year, the boys from the Bay Area were 1-5 in the division, but they will have to be much better to even get to .500 against their NFC West rivals.

Brock Purdy got a well-deserved big-time contract in the offseason, but he won't have veteran Deebo Samuel to play catch with this season. Samuel was traded to Washington for a fifth-round pick, and now the 49ers will have one less dominating receiver in their arsenal.

This looks like a good opportunity to fade the Niners.

Best Bet: Under 10 ½ (-145) Regular Season Wins

Seattle Seahawks

Despite winning six of their last eight games, en route to a 10-7 mark, the Seahawks were on the outside looking in when the playoffs began.

But Seattle made several wholesale changes in the offseason and signed Sam Darnold to a multi-year pact while trading away Geno Smith to the Raiders. They also signed a couple of veteran receivers in Cooper Kupp and Marquez Valdes-Scantling to boost the offense.

The Seahawks also had 11 draft picks in April and pretty much hit a home run. North Dakota State tackle Grey Zabel, the team's first-round selection, will be a fine addition to the Seahawks' offensive line, and getting South Carolina safety Nick Emmanwori in the second round was brimming with first-round value.

Assuming Darnold continues his ascension, this should be a solid season for the Seahawks, and they could be the league's dark horse. The total looks awfully low, so watch the Hawks fly high this season and go over.

Best Bet: Over 7 ½ (-145) Regular Season Wins

Los Angeles Rams

The Rams won the NFC West last season with a 10-7 record and defeated the Vikings in the opening round of the playoffs before getting ousted by the eventual Super Bowl-winning Eagles. It was a solid season and one that was built through last year's draft. However, this season, many of their draft picks were head-scratchers, designed more for depth than need.

Cornerback, linebacker, and center should have been a priority for the Rams, but only a linebacker was drafted, Mississippi's Chris Paul Jr., in the fifth round. Davante Adams will be turning 33 during the season and is replacing stalwart receiver Cooper Kupp.

This is not the brass knuckles defense from a few years ago, and if we review last year's 10-7 record, we see that the Rams were -19 in the +/- differential. Go low and get paid.

Best Bet: Under 9 ½ (-115) Regular Season Wins

Arizona Cardinals

The Redbirds needed to retool their defense, and they went all-in by selecting six of their seven draft picks on defensive players. Arizona got a steal at No. 16 overall with Ole Miss nose tackle Walter Nolen, a player many believed would be gone within the first 10 picks.

Arizona got another gem in the second round with Michigan's Will Johnson, who was ranked the second-best cornerback in the draft after Travis Hunter but only slid out of the first round due to a knee issue.

The consensus is that the Cards had one of the best drafts in 2025, and if Kyler Murray can establish a more seamless rapport with his young receiver, Marvin Harrison Jr., then this offense could really take flight. Arizona figures to be a bit stingier on defense, and that alone may be enough to get this team into the postseason. Don't sleep on Zona!

Best Bet: Over 8 ½ (-115) Regular Season Wins

NFC South Division Preview

New Orleans Saints

Texas' Kelvin Banks was the right choice at No. 9 overall to become the Saints' blindside protector for whoever will replace Derek Carr. But when New Orleans decided to throw caution to the wind and draft soon-to-be 26-year-old Louisville quarterback Tyler Shough in the second round as the future starter under center, you could hear the groans from Lafayette to Baton Rouge.

The Saints then spent their next four selections on the defensive side of the ball, with only fourth-round pick, linebacker Danny Stutsman, as one that could be considered dripping with value. New Orleans will have to lean heavily on its run game, with Alvin Kamara getting the lion's share of the workload.

This looks like a golden opportunity to fade the Saints and go low.

Best Bet: Under 5 ½ (-135) Regular Season Wins

Atlanta Falcons

The Falcons did a superb job of shoring up their anemic pass rush and porous defense in the draft. Georgia defensive end/linebacker Jalon Walker was a steal at No. 15, and when the Falcons saw an opportunity to draft Tennessee edge rusher James Pearce, the man they thought they would be drafting at No. 15, available at No. 26, they traded next year's first-rounder to get him.

As if that defensive improvement wasn't enough, Atlanta then found a stud safety in Notre Dame's Xavier Watts before they went back to the same well and chose Oklahoma's playmaking safety Billy Bowman in the fourth round.

With the optimism surrounding second-year quarterback Michael Penix Jr. and veteran Kirk Cousins as an expensive backup, the Falcons look poised to do what many believed they would do last year before their disappointing 8-9 record and make a postseason appearance.

Carolina Panthers

It was another dismal season for the Panthers in 2024 when they ended with a 5-12 record and still have a rather ponderous question mark in Bryce Young commanding the offense. In the draft, they made a boom-or-bust selection at No. 8 overall by selecting Arizona's Tet McMillan, who reminds many of another rangy first-round Arizona State product, N'Keal Harry, who was a complete bust for the Patriots a few years ago.

The Cats took defensive ends in the second and third rounds, but then inexplicably took Trevor Etienne in the fourth round when they had so many other more important holes to fill. Overall, not a great draft for a lousy team, and it's difficult to imagine this Carolina edition making any noise this season with a quarterback who may not get his fifth-year option picked up next year.

Best Bet: Under 6 ½ (U+110) Regular Season Wins

Tampa Bay Buccaneers

The Bucs won the NFC South last season with a 10-7 record but fell to the upstart Commanders in the Wild Card round. Not a bad season and something to build on for 2025. Baker Mayfield has resuscitated his career in Tampa and is a bona fide threat under center, with twin terrors Mike Evans and Chris Godwin on the wings.

Although getting depth at a position is never a bad thing, it was a head-scratcher when the Bucs picked Ohio State receiver Emeka Egbuka as their first-round pick and not one of the defensive standouts available.

Defense is what Tampa sorely needed in this draft, and they did bolster their secondary with back-to-back cornerback selections, including Notre Dame's Benjamin Morrison and Kansas State's Jacob Parrish, in the second and third rounds, respectively.

Overall, a rather humdrum draft for a team that could have used some serious punch in their pass rush.

Best Bet: Under 9 ½ (-120) Regular Season Wins

NFC North Division Preview

Detroit Lions

The Lions were America's team last season, with a grizzled head coach, Dan Campbell, putting together the pieces of a Super Bowl-caliber club after rising from the ashes of being the league's perennial laughingstock. Despite a 15-2 regular season record and a division title, the Lions were tamed in the postseason by the upstart Commanders in the divisional round.

Detroit made questionable draft picks in selecting Ohio State nose guard Tyleik Williams with the 28th overall selection and then reached for Arkansas wideout Isaac TeSlaa in the third round by shipping Jacksonville a couple of Day 2 picks for a player they could have likely landed in the fourth round. This was not an inspiring draft day performance.

Minnesota Vikings

Sam Darnold had a career renaissance in Minnesota, his first year with the team. He tossed over 4,300 yards with 35 touchdown strikes and only 12 picks. Unfortunately, he is plying his trade in Seattle this season while the Vikings gave the keys to the car to their first-round pick a year ago, JJ McCarthy, who spent the entire season sidelined with a torn meniscus in his right knee during the preseason.

It's a lot to ask of what is essentially a rookie quarterback to perform better than Darnold did last year, but the Vikings did shore up their offensive line by signing center Ryan Kelly in free agency and then drafting Ohio State guard Donovan Jackson with the 24th overall pick. Minnesota had only five picks this year, but they did land Maryland wideout Tai Felton.

This total is a high risk, as McCarthy is an unknown commodity in the NFL and is occupying the team's most important position. We'll go low but tread cautiously.

Best Bet: Under 8 ½ (+130) Regular Season Wins

Chicago Bears

Caleb Williams showed flashes of brilliance in his rookie campaign but also looked bewildered at times, holding the ball too long and making long-odds passes that would connect in college but not in the pros. He definitely needed an upgrade in protection, and the Bears did just that in drafting a stout tackle in Boston College's Ozzy Trapilo and signing 2x All-Pro guard Joe Thuney in the offseason.

As for weapons, Williams got more of them when the Bears drafted Michigan tight end Colston Loveland in the opening round, followed by Missouri wideout Luther Burden III with the first of two picks in the second. If the Bears can't make a marked improvement this season with Williams under center and a new offensive-minded coach in Ben Johnson, then maybe they need to think about a new triggerman.

Green Bay Packers

The Packers were a respectable 11-6 last season before they met the eventual Super Bowl champion in the Wild Card round, bowing 22-10. However, what they needed most was what they landed in the draft when they selected Texas receiver Matthew Golden, who clocked the fastest 40-yard dash time at 4.29 seconds.

The Packers are thinking outside the box, choosing a receiver in the opening round for the first time in 23 years. They then snapped up offensive tackle Anthony Belton out of NC State in the second round to increase protection in front of Jordan Love. Green Bay drafted another weapon on offense in the third round with TCU's Savion Williams, the best receiver in the class in contested catch rate (88.9%).

This edition looks superior to last year's, with 11 wins, so why not at least 10 this year?

Best Bet: Over 9 ½ (+100) Regular Season Wins
