AFC

EAST DIVISION

BUFFALO BILLS

The Bills remain the team to beat in the AFC East after another double-digit win season. Josh Allen is still the league's ultimate difference-maker, and Buffalo continues to build around him with another draft class focused on the defensive front and secondary.

Buffalo welcomes new defensive coordinator Jim Leonhard to the team while Sean McDermott remains a mainstay as head coach.

The biggest question is whether Buffalo has enough explosive weapons beyond its core playmakers after several veteran departures over the past two offseasons.

The roster has a few glaring weaknesses, but depth at cornerback and wide receiver bears watching during training camp. Buffalo remains built to contend for a Super Bowl.

Best Bet: Over 10.5 (-135) Regular Season Wins

NEW YORK JETS

After an aggressive offseason overhaul, the Jets appear to be one of the AFC's most intriguing wild cards. Aaron Glenn enters his second season as head coach with a revamped defense featuring several veteran additions, while Geno Smith returns to New York to stabilize the quarterback position.

The offense still revolves around Garrett Wilson and Breece Hall, but improved quarterback play should make the unit far more efficient than last season. The biggest concern is whether the offensive line can hold up over a full schedule.

New York should be significantly more competitive, though climbing past Buffalo and New England in the standings remains a difficult task.

Best Bet: Over 5.5 (+100) Regular Season Wins

MIAMI DOLPHINS

Miami enters 2026 facing more questions than any team in the division. The Dolphins spent the offseason trying to fix a roster that regressed in 2025. The team added help in the secondary and along the defensive front while using the draft to improve depth on both lines.

Tua Tagovailoa has exited South Beach, while journeyman Malik Willis will get his chance to be the primary man under center.

Tyreek Hill and Jaylen Waddle are still capable of changing a game in a single drive, while running back De'Von Achane is one of the best in the business. However, Miami's season hinges on better protection up front and on whether its gamble on Malik Willis pulling the trigger will pay off.

The Dolphins' margin for error is thin against one of the league's tougher schedules, but hovering near the .500 mark is realistic.

Best Bet: Over 4.5 (+120) Regular Season Wins

NEW ENGLAND PATRIOTS

The Patriots arrive as Buffalo's biggest challenger after a breakthrough 2025 campaign. Drake Maye looks every bit like a franchise quarterback entering his third season, and Mike Vrabel has quickly established the physical identity New England envisioned when he was hired.

The Patriots aggressively upgraded the roster through free agency and continue to surround Maye with better protection and playmakers in the form of Caleb Lomax (1st-round pick) and star wideout A.J. Brown, respectively.

Defensively, the front seven should again rank among the AFC's best. Expectations have climbed significantly, but so too has this year's level of competition on New England's schedule.

Although no one expects the Patriots to post another 14-win season, 10 wins certainly seem doable considering their offseason upgrades.

Best Bet: Over 9.5 (-150) Regular Season Wins

AFC WEST DIVISION

KANSAS CITY CHIEFS

Patrick Mahomes returns after an ACL injury derailed Kansas City's 2025 season, making his health the biggest variable in the division. The Chiefs reunited with Eric Bieniemy as offensive coordinator and brought back cornerback L'Jarius Sneed while using premium draft capital to rebuild a secondary that lost multiple starters.

Andy Reid and Steve Spagnuolo remain major advantages, and Mahomes is still capable of carrying the offense if fully healthy. The concerns are an aging core, questions at wide receiver, and whether the offensive line rebounds.

Kansas City should be much better than last year's 6-11 finish, but the AFC West is deeper than it has been in years, and getting double-digit wins is no longer a given for the Chiefs.

Best Bet: Under 10.5 (-150) Regular Season Wins

LOS ANGELES CHARGERS

Justin Herbert and Jim Harbaugh have established a high floor after consecutive 11-win seasons. Protecting Herbert remains the priority after the offensive line surrendered a franchise-record 60 sacks in 2025, making improved health and offseason reinforcements critical.

The Chargers return one of the NFL's better quarterback-coach combinations and enough offensive firepower to challenge for the division. Defensively, consistency and depth remain concerns against an unforgiving schedule.

Los Angeles has playoff talent, but reaching double-digit wins again requires better injury luck and cleaner play in one of the league's toughest divisions.

Best Bet: Over 9.5 (-150) Regular Season Wins

DENVER BRONCOS

Denver is coming off a 14-win season and largely kept its roster intact. The biggest addition was Jaylen Waddle, giving Bo Nix another explosive target as he returns from ankle surgery. Sean Payton also promoted Davis Webb to offensive coordinator, creating one of the league's most intriguing coaching changes.

Patrick Surtain II still anchors an elite defense, and continuity is a major strength. The questions center on Nix's recovery and whether the offense takes another step after ranking in the middle of the league despite the gaudy record.

A brutal schedule could prevent another top seed, but this roster remains one of the AFC's most complete.

Best Bet: Over 9.5 (-125) Regular Season Wins

LAS VEGAS RAIDERS

The Raiders enter a new era after selecting quarterback Francisco Mendoza with the No. 1 overall pick. Klint Kubiak inherited a rebuilding offense featuring Brock Bowers and a revamped supporting cast, while the front office aggressively upgraded the defense with Nakobe Dean, Quay Walker, Taron Johnson, and Kwity Paye.

Maxx Crosby remains the face of the franchise after an offseason trade nearly sent him to Baltimore. Las Vegas should be more competitive than last year's 3-14 record, but relying on a rookie quarterback in the NFL's toughest division creates inevitable growing pains.

Best Bet: Over 5.5 (-145) Regular Season Wins

AFC SOUTH DIVISION

JACKSONVILLE JAGUARS

The Jaguars flipped the script by rebounding from a 4-13 campaign in 2024 to a 13-4 regular-season mark and an AFC South crown last season. Trevor Lawrence was better than the previous year by tossing 29 touchdowns and 12 picks, but his completion percentage was below 61% for the second consecutive season.

Jacksonville didn't have a first-round pick in the 2026 NFL Draft after trading it to Cleveland as part of last year's move up for Travis Hunter, making second-round tight end Nate Boerkircher their first selection.

Free agency focused on depth rather than splash, with running back Chris Rodriguez Jr., linebacker Dennis Gardeck, and cornerback Montaric Brown among the key additions and re-signings.

If Hunter returns healthy and the defense takes another step, Jacksonville has a legitimate chance to repeat as division champions.

Best Bet: Over 9.5 (+110) Regular Season Wins

TENNESSEE TITANS

The Titans believed they found their franchise quarterback last year when they tapped Cam Ward as the No. 1 overall pick, but it didn't translate into a winning record, as Tennessee ended in the basement of the AFC South with a 3-14 record.

The team used the fourth overall pick this year on Ohio State wide receiver Carnell Tate, giving Ward another explosive target alongside Calvin Ridley.

General manager Mike Borgonzi also attacked free agency, adding wide receiver Wan'Dale Robinson, cornerback Alontae Taylor, defensive lineman John Franklin-Myers, and tight end Daniel Bellinger to strengthen both sides of the ball.

First-year head coach Robert Saleh inherits a roster with more talent than last year's record suggests, but offensive line consistency and overall depth remain concerns.

Best Bet: Under 6.5 (-125) Regular Season Wins

INDIANAPOLIS COLTS

Will the real Daniel Jones please stand up? That is the million-dollar question, and it will determine the fate of the Indianapolis Colts. The former Giants savior resurrected his career last season but got hurt down the home stretch.

Yet now he's back, and former first-round pick Anthony Richardson will be breathing down his neck to get his chance to revive his own floundering career.

Indianapolis continued building around its young quarterback by adding offensive weapons and reinforcing the secondary through free agency and the draft. Shane Steichen remains one of the league's better offensive play-callers, and Jonathan Taylor may be the most electrifying running back in the league.

Laiatu Latu leads an improving pass rush that should keep the defense competitive. Should Jones stay healthy and play like he did last year, then the Colts could surprise and easily soar over the current posted total.

Best Bet: Over 7.5 (-135) Regular Season Wins

HOUSTON TEXANS

Houston enters 2026 as the team to beat in the AFC South after another playoff appearance. C.J. Stroud remains the franchise centerpiece, but the Texans spent the offseason improving his protection and adding depth on both lines. Their draft class focused on trench play and defensive speed, while the front office retained much of the roster that made consecutive postseason runs.

The triumvirate of Will Anderson Jr., Derek Stingley Jr., and Danielle Hunter headlines a ferocious defense, but the biggest question is whether the offensive line can consistently keep Stroud upright against elite pass rushes. Houston has the division's highest ceiling, but another demanding schedule makes double-digit wins far from automatic.

Best Bet: Under 9.5 (-130) Regular Season Wins

AFC NORTH DIVISION

CINCINNATI BENGALS

Joe Burrow gives Cincinnati a chance to beat anyone, but the Bengals spent the offseason trying to fix a defense that let them down too often. They made their biggest splash by trading the No. 10 overall pick for All-Pro defensive tackle Dexter Lawrence, then added edge rusher Boye Mafe and safety Bryan Cook in free agency.

Second-round pick Cashius Howell adds another young pass rusher to the rotation. The dynamic duo of Ja'Marr Chase and Tee Higgins headlines one of football's most dangerous passing attacks, but offensive line consistency remains a concern. If the revamped defense produces more pressure and takeaways, Cincinnati could quickly return to contender status.

Best Bet: Over 9.5 (-170) Regular Season Wins

BALTIMORE RAVENS

The Ravens have reunited with defensive guru Jesse Minter after parting ways with longtime head coach John Harbaugh. Minter served as a defensive coach under Harbaugh several years ago and will now be tasked with elevating last season's disappointing edition that ended with an 8-9 record.

The Ravens used their first-round pick on Penn State offensive lineman Vega to reinforce the trenches while retaining most of their core after a relatively quiet free-agency period. Derrick Henry, Zay Flowers, Kyle Hamilton, and Roquan Smith remain the foundation on both sides of the ball.

The biggest question is whether a new coaching staff can maintain Baltimore's consistently physical identity after the offseason changes. The defense remains elite, but replacing key leadership won't be seamless.

Best Bet: Under 11.5 (-140) Regular Season Wins

CLEVELAND BROWNS

Cleveland took an aggressive approach to rebuilding its offense after another disappointing season. New head coach Todd Monken inherited a roster with a crowded quarterback room, while the front office overhauled the offensive line by adding Tytus Howard, Elgton Jenkins, and Zion Johnson before selecting tackle Spencer Fano in the first round.

The Browns then chose Kansas State receiver KC Concepcion with their second first-round pick (No. 24 overall), giving the passing game another young playmaker alongside emerging tight end Harold Fannin Jr.

The Browns still have talent, but uncertainty under center remains the franchise's greatest obstacle. Defensively, replacing Myles Garrett's production is no small task despite welcoming 2x Pro Bowler

Jared Verse to the fold. If nothing else, this will be an interesting season for Cleveland fans and perhaps the arrival of a long-term solution at quarterback.

Best Bet: Over 5.5 (-110) Regular Season Wins

PITTSBURGH STEELERS

The Steelers begin a new era with Aaron Rodgers returning for another season and rookie first-round quarterback Drew Allar developing behind him. Pittsburgh also added former Colts receiver Michael Pittman and second-round pick Germie Bernard to complement DK Metcalf and provide Rodgers with more weapons.

T.J. Watt continues to anchor an elite pass rush, and Pittsburgh's defense remains the team's biggest strength, featuring Watt, Cam Heyward, Joey Porter Jr., and Alex Highsmith.

However, offensive consistency is the concern after another uneven season, and the line must protect an aging quarterback. If Rodgers provides steady play, Pittsburgh has enough defensive firepower to stay in the playoff race.

But how effective will Rodgers be after spending much of the offseason remaining uncommitted about a return to the Steel City?

Best Bet: Under 7.5 (+115) Regular Season Wins

NFC

NFC EAST DIVISION

PHILADELPHIA EAGLES

Fresh off another NFC East title, Philadelphia remains the team everyone is chasing. Jalen Hurts returns behind one of football's best offensive lines, while DeVonta Smith headlines a talented offense following A.J. Brown's offseason departure. The Eagles also welcomed several veteran defensive additions to offset key losses and continue to rely on a deep, well-built roster.

Nick Sirianni has proven this team can reload rather than rebuild, although replacing Brown's production is the biggest question. First-round receiver Makai Lemon out of USC has an opportunity to contribute immediately and could become a key piece if he develops quickly. Philadelphia's depth on both lines keeps its floor high, but the seemingly improved strength of the Eagles' chief rival, Dallas, could make things interesting.

Best Bet: Under 10.5 (-145) Regular Season Wins

DALLAS COWBOYS

Dak Prescott enters the season healthy, giving Dallas legitimate playoff expectations after an inconsistent 2025 campaign. Dallas' offense will return Prescott and his dynamic duo of twin terrors, CeeDee Lamb and George Pickens. The Cowboys didn't undergo major offensive coaching changes, instead betting on improved health and continuity.

Protecting Prescott remains a concern after offensive line turnover, but the Cowboys addressed the defense by drafting safety Caleb Downs of Ohio State, who developed a reputation in college as being the quarterback of the defense.

Also added an edge rusher, UCF's Malachi Lawrence, as the No. 23 overall pick. Former Eagles defensive backs coach Christian Parker takes over as the defensive coordinator. If the offensive line remains healthy, this roster has enough talent to challenge Philadelphia for the division.

Best Bet: Over 9.5 (-105) Regular Season Wins

NEW YORK GIANTS

The Giants are counting on quarterback Jaxson Dart taking another step after an injury-disrupted rookie season. Malik Nabers remains the centerpiece of the offense, while John Harbaugh assumes the reins after spending 18 seasons as the Ravens' head coach.

New York invested heavily in the trenches and added first-round linebacker Arvell Reese as the No. 5 overall pick, who projects as an immediate starter capable of improving a defense that struggled against the run.

The offensive line should be bolstered by the selection of Miami's Francis Mauigoa with the 10th overall pick. However, consistency at quarterback remains the biggest variable. If Dart develops into a reliable starter, the Giants could surprise in a competitive division.

Best Bet: Under 7.5 (-120) Regular Season Wins

WASHINGTON COMMANDERS

Washington enters 2026 needing a bounce-back after a disappointing 5-12 finish. Dan Quinn and general manager Adam Peters reshaped the roster with former Titan Chig Okonkwo while signing Odafe Oweh and Charles Omenihu to improve the defense. The team will also see new offensive and defensive coordinators in David Blough and Daronte Jones, respectively.

Quarterback remains the biggest concern, and the offense lacks proven playmakers beyond Terry McLaurin. First-round linebacker and No. 7 overall pick Sonny Styles should be a Day One starter and is expected to bring the same athleticism and versatility to the middle of the defense as he did at Ohio State.

The Commanders appear improved defensively, but questions on offense and the health of quarterback Jayden Daniels make sustained success difficult to project.

Best Bet: Under 7.5 (+100) Regular Season Wins

NFC WEST DIVISION

SAN FRANCISCO 49ERS

San Francisco bounced back with a 12-5 season and enters 2026 looking like one of the NFC's deepest rosters again. Brock Purdy has firmly established himself as the franchise quarterback, while Christian McCaffrey, George Kittle, Ricky Pearsall, and the recently signed 6x Pro Bowler Mike Evans headline the offense.

The 49ers added defensive reinforcements through the draft and traded for Osa Odighizuwa to strengthen the interior defensive line. Defensive coordinator Raheem Morris is taking over the unit, making that transition one of the biggest storylines entering training camp.

Kyle Shanahan still has elite talent on both sides of the ball, and few teams can match San Francisco's roster depth. Assuming reasonable health, the 49ers have the firepower to win 11 or more games and challenge for the NFC West title.

Best Bet: Over 10.5 (+110) Regular Season Wins

SEATTLE SEAHAWKS

Seattle enters the season with enormous expectations after a surprising 14-3 campaign that ended with a Super Bowl championship. Mike Macdonald proved his first two seasons were no fluke, and the Seahawks return the core that fueled last year's run.

Sam Darnold silenced critics with the best season of his career, while Kenneth Walker III, Jaxon Smith-Njigba, and an aggressive defense remain the foundation of the roster. Seattle added another first-round playmaker through the draft, but repeating a magical season is historically difficult.

Opponents will be targeting the defending champions every week, and their schedule is significantly tougher. The Seahawks should remain among the NFC's top teams, but asking them to win at least 11 regular-season games leaves little margin for error in a brutal division.

Best Bet: Under 10.5 (-115) Regular Season Wins

LOS ANGELES RAMS

Sean McVay continues to maximize one of the league's most efficient offenses, replete with gunslinger Matthew Stafford, 2025 First-Team All-Pro Puka Nacua, complemented by 6x Pro Bowler Davante Adams, and running back Kyren Williams, who has had two consecutive seasons of 1200+ yards rushing.

And if the offense doesn't make the opposition sit up and take notice, the Rams swung a deal for the most ferocious pass rusher in the league, Myles Garrett. Rumors are also swirling that former 8x First-Team All-Pro Aaron Donald may be wooed out of retirement to join the NFL's version of a super team.

Anything can happen, especially injuries and a daunting division schedule featuring double dates with Seahawks and 49ers, but notching a dozen wins does not seem unrealistic for this Rams edition.

Best Bet: Over 11.5 (-145) Regular Season Wins

ARIZONA CARDINALS

The Cardinals sent Kyler Murray packing after seven years in the desert. Mike LaFleur, Arizona's new head coach, has decided to hand the reins of the offense to either Jacoby Brissett, Gardner Minshew, or Carson Beck. That is a daunting prospect considering all have toiled mainly as serviceable backups throughout their respective careers.

The biggest move came in the draft with the selection of the explosive Fighting Irish running back Jeremiyah Love with the third overall pick, giving the offense another option alongside Marvin Harrison Jr., Trey McBride, and James Conner.

However, they are expected to occupy the NFC West basement yet again due to a suspect defense and an unproven field marshal. Nevertheless, the total is low, and they could be surprised to get over the season win hump.

Best Bet: Over 4.5 (+125) Regular Season Wins

NFC SOUTH DIVISION

NEW ORLEANS SAINTS

The Saints are banking on Tyler Shough taking another step after flashing at times in his rookie campaign. Kellen Moore enters his second season with greater continuity, while the front office aggressively upgraded the supporting cast through free agency before selecting wide receiver Jordyn Tyson with the eighth overall pick to give Shough another playmaker alongside Chris Olave.

Travis Etienne was signed away from the Jaguars in the offseason and adds explosiveness to the backfield, with Alvin Kamara assuming the backup role. However, replacing veteran defensive leadership remains a challenge after several departures. If the young secondary develops, New Orleans has enough talent to compete for the division. The offense should be noticeably more dynamic than it was a year ago.

Best Bet: Over 7.5 (-135) Regular Season Wins

ATLANTA FALCONS

Michael Penix Jr. has company in the quarterback room after the Falcons signed former Dolphins starter Tua Tagovailoa. Regardless of who is pulling the trigger, they will have the luxury of one of the league's most explosive skill-position trios in Bijan Robinson, Drake London, and tight end Kyle Pitts.

Without a first-round pick, the Falcons selected Clemson cornerback Avieon Terrell in the second round and signed free agent wide receiver Jahan Dotson, edge rusher Azeez Ojulari, and defensive lineman Chris William.

Defensive coordinator Jeff Ulbrich is counting on a stingier secondary after too many late-game breakdowns in 2025. However, the line did register a franchise-record 57 sacks last season and should be a force again this season. The offensive ceiling is high, but quarterback uncertainty remains the biggest risk.

Best Bet: Over 7.5 (+105) Regular Season Wins

CAROLINA PANTHERS

Fresh off an NFC South title, the Panthers enter 2026 trying to prove that last season was the start of something bigger rather than a one-hit wonder. Bryce Young showed clear progress under Dave Canales, giving Carolina stability at quarterback for the first time in years.

The front office focused on surrounding him with more talent protection in the opening round by selecting Georgia offensive tackle Monroe Freeling and added rangy Tennessee wideout Chris Brazzell in the third round.

Nose tackle Derrick Brown, cornerback Jaycee Horn, and tailback Chuba Hubbard headline a solid returning core. The biggest concern remains generating consistent pressure without relying on blitzes, but the roster has fewer glaring holes than a year ago, and its schedule is more daunting.

Best Bet: Under 7.5 (-140) Regular Season Wins

TAMPA BAY BUCS

Tampa Bay enters a transitional season after several notable roster changes, including the departure of longtime star Mike Evans. Baker Mayfield remains under center, but he'll be working with a reshaped receiving corps after the Buccaneers emphasized defense in both free agency and their first two picks in the draft, including Rueben Bain Jr. and Josiah Trotter.

Todd Bowles' biggest priority was finding a true edge rusher to improve a pass rush that has lacked consistent production for several seasons, but whether he found the cure that ails his team is uncertain. The defense still features standouts such as Vita Vea and Antoine Winfield Jr., while the offensive line remains a strength. Replacing Evans' production, however, won't be easy, and the offense could take time to find its identity.

Best Bet: Under 8.5 (-150) Regular Season Wins

NFC NORTH DIVISION

DETROIT LIONS

Detroit is looking for a quick rebound after slipping to 9-8 and missing the playoffs following the departures of both coordinators. Dan Campbell still has one of the league's best offensive foundations with Jared Goff, Jahmyr Gibbs, David Montgomery, Amon-Ra St. Brown, and Jameson Williams returning. The front office prioritized rebuilding the offensive line, selecting Clemson tackle Blake Miller in the first round while adding 6'6" center Cade Mays in free agency.

Aidan Hutchinson remains the centerpiece of a defense that needs more complementary pass rushers. The Lions have enough talent to return to playoff contention if the offense regains its 2024 form, but questions remain about replacing the coaching continuity that fueled previous success. Nevertheless, this team is too talented not to challenge for the NFC North crown.

Best Bet: Over 10.5 (-130) Regular Season Wins

MINNESOTA VIKINGS

Minnesota made one of the league's biggest offseason moves by acquiring Kyler Murray, creating competition with J.J. McCarthy and giving head coach Kevin O'Connell a proven veteran under center. Murray inherits an outstanding supporting cast led by Justin Jefferson, Jordan Addison, and T.J. Hockenson.

Defensive coordinator Brian Flores continues to field an aggressive defense despite losing key edge rusher Jonathan Greenard. The Vikings also focused on replenishing defensive talent through the draft with the selection of Florida defensive tackle Caleb Banks in the first round, followed by Cincinnati linebacker Jake Golday in the second round.

If Murray returns to his Pro Bowl form and the defense answers the bell, Minnesota could emerge as the winner of the Black and Blue Division.

Best Bet: Over 8.5 (-110) Regular Season Wins

CHICAGO BEARS

The Bears broke through in 2025, winning the division at 11-6 as Caleb Williams took a major step forward. The former No. 1 overall pick dramatically cut his sacks from 68 to 24, showing better pocket awareness and decision-making.

Chicago front office kept building around its young core, drafting Oregon safety Dillon Thieneman and adding depth after losing veterans Tremaine Edmunds and Kevin Byard. Williams is surrounded by a talented supporting cast that includes Rome Odunze, D.J. Moore, Colston Loveland, and D'Andre Swift behind a solid offensive line.

The biggest question remains the pass rush outside of Montez Sweat. Chicago looks built to contend again, but the schedule is tougher than last season's. Moreover, they won many games late last year, and that is not a recipe for sustainable success.

Best Bet: Under 9.5 (-130) Regular Season Wins

GREEN BAY PACKERS

The Packers boast one of the NFC's most talented rosters, but expectations are tempered after another season that fell short. Jordan Love continues to provide stability at quarterback, while Josh Jacobs, Tucker Kraft, and a deep receiving corps keep the offense balanced.

Green Bay has a bona fide stud on defense in Micah Parsons, but his services came at a high price, as evidenced by their lack of a first-round pick last April and in next year's draft. South Carolina cornerback Brandon Cisse was chosen by the Packers in the second round, while their biggest free agent signing was defensive tackle Javon Hargrave to a two-year deal.

The Packers haven't done much to improve on their 9-7-1 record last year, which doesn't inspire much hope for double-digit victories this season.

Best Bet: Under 9.5 (-110) Regular Season Wins
