Atlanta Hawks

The Atlanta Hawks have been on a downward trajectory since getting to the Eastern Conference Finals for the 2020-21 season. In Quin Snyder's second full season as head coach of the team, they finished with a 40-42 record and missed the playoffs. That's back-to-back years missing the playoffs. However, things are looking up for Atlanta. They added Kristaps Porziņģis, Nickeil Alexander-Walker, Luke Kennard and Asa Newell. The Hawks also have some young talent who are still ascending. Dyson Daniels was the NBA's Most Improved Player in 2024-25, and last year's No. 1 pick Zaccharie Risacher finished second in Rookie of the Year voting. Trae Young has been the subject of trade rumors in recent years, but he's not going anywhere. There's a lot to like about this Hawks team. Snyder is a very good coach, and the roster has talent. The Eastern Conference should be wide open next year, and Atlanta will be a hot pick to get into the playoffs. Once the playoffs start, Young has proven to be a clutch performer. The Hawks could be an exciting team once again.

Boston Celtics

The Boston Celtics went on a dominant championship run in 2023-24, and many expected them to repeat in 2024-25. That was until they ran into the Indiana Pacers in the playoffs. The Pacers were starting to get control of that series, and then the Celtics got devastating news when Jayson Tatum ruptured his Achilles. He's now going to miss the entire 2024-25 season. No team had a worse offseason than Boston. Armed with the knowledge that Tatum won't be playing, they decided to do some bookkeeping. Keep contributors like Kristaps Porziņģis and Jrue Holiday are gone. The Celtics did add Anfernee Simons, who is a good young player, but he's not going to replace Tatum. This is going to be a retooling year for Boston. Don't be surprised if Jaylen Brown misses a lot of games this season. The biggest goal for the Celtics this year is to get the best draft pick possible, so that when Tatum is healthy again, they'll have the pieces to go on another run. It's going to be a long season for Boston fans.

Brooklyn Nets

It feels like a distant memory when the Brooklyn Nets were one of the most interesting teams in the NBA. After making the playoffs for five straight seasons from 2018 to 2023, the Nets have missed the postseason in back-to-back years. Sadly for the team, there doesn't appear to be a light at the end of the tunnel. Cameron Johnson was one of their best players last season, but he was traded to the Denver Nuggets. Cam Thomas is an exciting young player who had a career-high 24.0 ppg last season. Brooklyn's biggest offseason addition was former Nuggets forward Michael Porter Jr. He should be able to put up some pretty big numbers for the Nets, but it doesn't help get them closer to the playoffs. Brooklyn finished with the fourth-worst record in the Eastern Conference last season, and it's hard to see how they've gotten any better. Barring any surprise trades for a big name, the Nets are more likely to finish the season with the No. 1 pick than they are to get back to the playoffs.

Charlotte Hornets

The Charlotte Hornets haven't won a playoff series since they returned to the NBA as the Charlotte Bobcats in 2004. That's not likely to change this season, but brighter days could be ahead. The Hornets have stocked up on lottery players in recent years and landed former Duke guard Kon Knueppel with the No. 4 pick in the 2025 NBA Draft. The biggest concern with the team is whether or not LaMelo Ball is the right player to lead them to the playoffs. He averaged a career-high 25.2 ppg last season, but was also limited to just 47 games due to injury. He has played more than 51 games in a season just once. The Hornets did add Collin Sexton, who is a dependable scorer who should help pick up the slack if Ball misses time. Brandon Miller could be the key to the team's playoff chances. The former No. 2 overall pick averaged 21.0 ppg last season and is looking to make a third-year leap. If he can develop into a star in Year 3, the Hornets could be a sneaky playoff team. They just need a lot of things to go right to make that happen.

Chicago Bulls

It's hard to hard to believe that the Chicago Bulls were once the premier franchise in the NBA. Unfortunately for them, Michael Jordan is long retired, and he's not coming to save the team. For the third year in a row, Billy Donovan's squad couldn't get to the playoffs. Instead of making a change at head coach, the Bulls extended Donovan, who has just a single playoff game in five seasons leading the team. The only notable loss Chicago had this offseason was Lonzo Ball, but he hasn't done much since joining them, so it shouldn't hurt them much. The biggest moves they made were drafting Noa Essengue and trading for Isaac Okoro. Both players are solid young guys, but don't move the needle much. The Bulls haven't been terrible in recent years, as they've made the play-in tournament three years in a row. The problem is that they keep losing in the play-in tournament. Unless there's another big move coming, it's hard to see the Bulls as anything more than a play-in team this season.

Cleveland Cavaliers

The Cleveland Cavaliers were one of the most disappointing teams in the NBA last season. For the third year in a row, the team had an early playoff exit despite being loaded with talent. It was a historic regular season for the Cavaliers, as they won 64 games, which was the best in the Eastern Conference. After sweeping the Miami Heat in the first round, they lost in five games to the Indiana Pacers. That's just not acceptable for a team that won 64 games in the regular season. The Cavaliers didn't have any big losses this offseason and did land Lonzo

Ball, who should provide some good depth at guard. However, the core of Donovan Mitchell, Darius Garland and Evan Mobley is still intact. That's one of the better trios in the NBA, so there aren't any excuses this season. Anything less than an appearance in the Eastern Conference Finals would be a disappointment. Kenny Atkinson was supposed to help with playoff success when he replaced J.B. Bickerstaff, but he had the same issues. This is the year for the Cavaliers to finally get over the hump, or they'll need to consider shaking up the roster.

Dallas Mavericks

No team had a more eventful 2024-25 season than the Dallas Mavericks. After making the NBA Finals in 2023-24, Dallas decided to trade away superstar guard Luka Dončić to the Los Angeles Lakers in what was one of the most surprising news stories in NBA history. The hope was that adding Anthony Davis would lead to short-term gains, but he got hurt, and then Kyrie Irving got injured. The Mavericks ended up missing the playoffs while the Lakers ascended to the No. 3 seed in the Western Conference. It appeared that Dallas was headed toward disaster until they won the NBA Draft lottery and used the No. 1 pick on Duke superstar Cooper Flagg. That should reenergize the Mavericks fan base after that was not happy with the franchise following the Dončić trade. Irving is going to miss much of the 2025-26 season, so the ceiling might be limited for this team, but if Davis stays healthy and Flagg is as good as advertised, the Mavericks should be in the playoff mix this season. If they get to the playoffs and Irving is healthy, a deep run isn't out of the question.

Denver Nuggets

The Denver Nuggets were among the favorites to win the NBA championship last season, but couldn't get past the second round of the playoffs after losing to the Oklahoma City Thunder in seven. Nikola Jokić is still arguably the best player in the NBA and nearly won his fourth MVP award last season. The team made a big change during the season when they hired head coach Michael Malone and replaced him with David Adelman. Adelman earned the full-time job this offseason, so he's a bit of an unknown. The Nuggets had a very good offseason. They traded away Michael Porter Jr. and landed Cameron Johnson. They also added good role players like Jonas Valančiūnas, Bruce Brown and Tim Hardaway Jr. With Jokić still at the peak of his powers and having a strong roster around him, the Nuggets are going to be among the favorites to win the championship again. As is usually the case, the team's playoff success could hinge on the health of Jamal Murray, but things are looking very promising for Denver.

Detroit Pistons

In 2023-24, the Detroit Pistons had one of the worst seasons in the history of the NBA. They won just 14 games and fired head coach Monty Williams after just one season. That was the fifth season in a row that they had 23 wins or fewer. Things were about as bad as they could get for Detroit, but instead of continuing to tank, the Pistons finally turned things around. Led by new head coach J.B. Bickerstaff and star guard Cade Cunningham, the Pistons were finally able to put together a great season. They had a 44-38 record, which made them the sixth seed in the Eastern Conference. They ended up losing to the New York Knicks in the first round, but they did take them to six games. It's clear that Bickerstaff has the team headed in the right direction. This offseason, the Pistons did lose Tim Hardaway Jr. and Dennis Schröder, but gained Caris LeVert and Duncan Robinson. Detroit likely needs another superstar to pair with Cunningham before they can be considered a real contender, but they should contend for a playoff spot this season.

Golden State Warriors

The Golden State Warriors dynasty looked like it was officially over heading into last season. The team didn't even make the playoffs in 2023-24, and they lost Klay Thompson and Chris Paul in free agency. The 2024-25 season didn't get off to a good start, but things changed when they added star forward Jimmy Butler. He completely changed things for the team, and they went on a big run to end the season. The team beat the No. 2 seed Houston Rockets in the first round of the playoffs and may have gotten past the Minnesota Timberwolves in the second round had Steph Curry not gotten hurt. This offseason, the Warriors had been linked to several big names, but weren't able to add anybody of note. The roster at the end of last season is going to look very similar to this season. That's not necessarily a bad thing, as the Butler-Curry pairing clearly works. However, the Warriors will likely continue to be in the market for big names. It'll be difficult for this current roster, filled with aging veterans, to go on a long playoff run.

Houston Rockets

The Houston Rockets were one of the biggest success stories of the 2024-25 season. After missing the playoffs for four straight seasons, the team went all-in last year by giving big money to Dillon Brooks and Fred VanFleet, while hiring former Boston Celtics head coach Ime Udoka. Instead of going into this season with the same core, the Rockets were aggressive and traded for superstar forward Kevin Durant. They did have to give up Jalen Green and Brooks in the process, but Houston may have had the best offseason in all of basketball. In addition to the Durant trade, they signed Dorian Finney-Smith and Clint Capela, while re-signing Steven Adams. The Rockets were very young last season, but now they have some veterans with championship experience. Alperen Şengün is also coming into his own as one of the best big men in the NBA. The Rockets have amazing size, playmaking and scoring all over the roster. If Durant can stay healthy, the Rockets have to be among the favorites to come out of the West.

Indiana Pacers

Last season was a storybook year for the Indiana Pacers until it wasn't. They upset the Boston Celtics and New York Knicks in the Eastern Conference playoffs to make it to the NBA Finals. They were underdogs against the Oklahoma City Thunder, but were able to get the series to a Game 7. They kept it competitive in that game before superstar guard Tyrese Haliburton tore his Achilles and had to leave the game. The Pacers ended up losing to the Thunder. To make matters worse, Haliburton will miss the entire 2025-26 season due to the injury. With that in mind, the Pacers let starting center Myles Turner walk in free agency. It's hard to find a team that has had a harder offseason than Indiana. With Haliburton out, this might be a good year to refresh and try to get a high lottery pick. The Pacers won't be able to compete for a championship without their best player, and there aren't any other stars on the roster right now. It's going to be a long year for Indiana fans.

Los Angeles Clippers

The Los Angeles Clippers are a difficult team to gauge. Every season, they have enough pieces to compete for a championship, but manage to lose early in the playoffs. Last season, they lost to the Denver Nuggets in round one, which was the third year in a row they had a first-round playoff exit. The Clippers are clearly committed to going on a run this year. They signed Bradley Beal and Chris Paul in free agency, who could both be impact players if they stay healthy. The Clippers were also able to extend James Harden. John Collins comes over from the Utah Jazz after averaging 19 ppg last season. The biggest question surrounding the Clippers is the same question that surrounds them every season: Can they stay healthy? Kawhi Leonard played in just 37 games last season, while Paul and Beal are huge injury risks. If they all stay healthy for the playoffs, this is a team that can win a championship, but it's best to take a "believe it when I see it" approach with this Clippers squad.

Los Angeles Lakers

No team got a bigger boost during the regular season than the Los Angeles Lakers. After a good, not great start to the year, the Lakers pulled off a shocking trade for superstar guard Luka Doncic. Instead of fighting for a play-in spot, the team shot up to the No. 3 seed in the Western Conference. The problem was that they lost to the Minnesota Timberwolves in the first round of the playoffs. There are too many question marks surrounding this Lakers team to feel too confident.

Can Deandre Ayton stay healthy? Is Luka Doncic truly in the best shape of his career? Will LeBron James be on the roster at the end of the season? If these answers are all "yes," then the Lakers have a chance to compete for a championship. However, it feels likely that the roster that they start the season with won't be the roster at the end of the year. The Lakers have enough high-end talent to go on an NBA Finals one, but there are too many questions to feel overly confident about their chances.

Memphis Grizzlies

The Memphis Grizzlies were able to get back into the playoffs last season after missing them in 2023-24. However, they got swept in the first round by the Oklahoma City Thunder. Memphis had some drama last season when they fired head coach Taylor Jenkins right before the playoffs. Tuomas Iisalo, who was a Grizzlies assistant last season, is now the head coach. That was his lone year in the NBA, so it remains to be seen if he'll have success, but he was the Finnish Coach of the Year in 2024. As is usually the case, Ja

Morant's availability will determine the success of the team. He has played just 59 games combined over the last two years due to injuries and suspension. Now that he was able to have a relatively normal season last year should lead to a better 2025-26. The biggest move they made was trading away Desmond Bane, but they added Kentavious Caldwell-Pope and a treasure trove of draft picks. This is likely a retooling year for Memphis, so the playoffs are unlikely, but the future is bright.

Miami Heat

For the second year in a row, the Miami Heat were able to sneak into the playoffs as the eighth seed, but lost in the first round. The Heat had Jimmy Butler's trade request lingering over them for most of the year, and were finally able to send him away to the Golden State Warriors. Miami didn't lose any big names this offseason, but they were able to add Norman Powell, who should be a starter. However, it's difficult to find the star players on this roster. Bam Adebayo is a good center, and Andrew Wiggins can make plays, but neither are All-NBA-level players.

It's paramount that this team tries to swing a big trade either before or during the season. There are star players who become available every season, so there should be options for Miami. As of now, their ceiling is an early playoff exit. They didn't make any substantial moves this offseason, and it seems like they're always linked to star players but never pull the trigger on deals. Erik Spoelstra is capable of making some magic happen, but he can only take the team so far. Pat Riley is a respected basketball mind, but he's failed to put together a good roster for a few years now.

Milwaukee Bucks

The Milwaukee Bucks are going to be an interesting team to keep an eye on this season. For the second season in a row, they got knocked out in the first round of the playoffs by the Indiana Pacers. Unlike the previous season, Giannis Antetokounmpo was able to play in every game, but that still wasn't good enough. This offseason, Damian Lillard was surprisingly released, and Myles Turner was signed to a big contract. The Bucks also added Cole Anthony and Gary Harris. None of this news really moves the needle for Milwaukee. Once again, they'll be asking Giannis to carry a massive workload. Luckily, he remains one of the best players in the NBA. He averaged a 30.4 ppg last season. Regardless of accolades, he's still one of the best defensive players in the NBA. The biggest concern is that there isn't enough around him, and there are trade rumors surrounding his name. If Milwaukee gets off to a rough start, those rumors will get louder. As of now, it looks like another early playoff exit will be in their future unless they can swing a big trade.

Minnesota Timberwolves

For the second season in a row, the Minnesota Timberwolves made it to the Western Conference Finals. It wasn't an easy road, as they had to beat the Los Angeles Lakers and Golden State Warriors to get there. However, they lost in five games to the Oklahoma City Thunder. The next step for this team is to make it to the NBA Finals, but it remains to be seen if they've closed the gap with the Thunder. Instead of making big additions, the Timberwolves decided to retain their own guys and signed Julius Randle and Naz Reid to massive contract extensions. There isn't much difference about this team, but that might not be a bad thing. Anthony Edwards is a young player, and him taking the next step could be all that it takes to get over the hump. He followed up his breakout season in 2023-24 with an even better year last season. He's cemented himself as one of the best players in the NBA, and the next goal for him should be to lead Minnesota to a championship. They should be one of the favorites to come out of the West in 2025-26.

New Orleans Pelicans

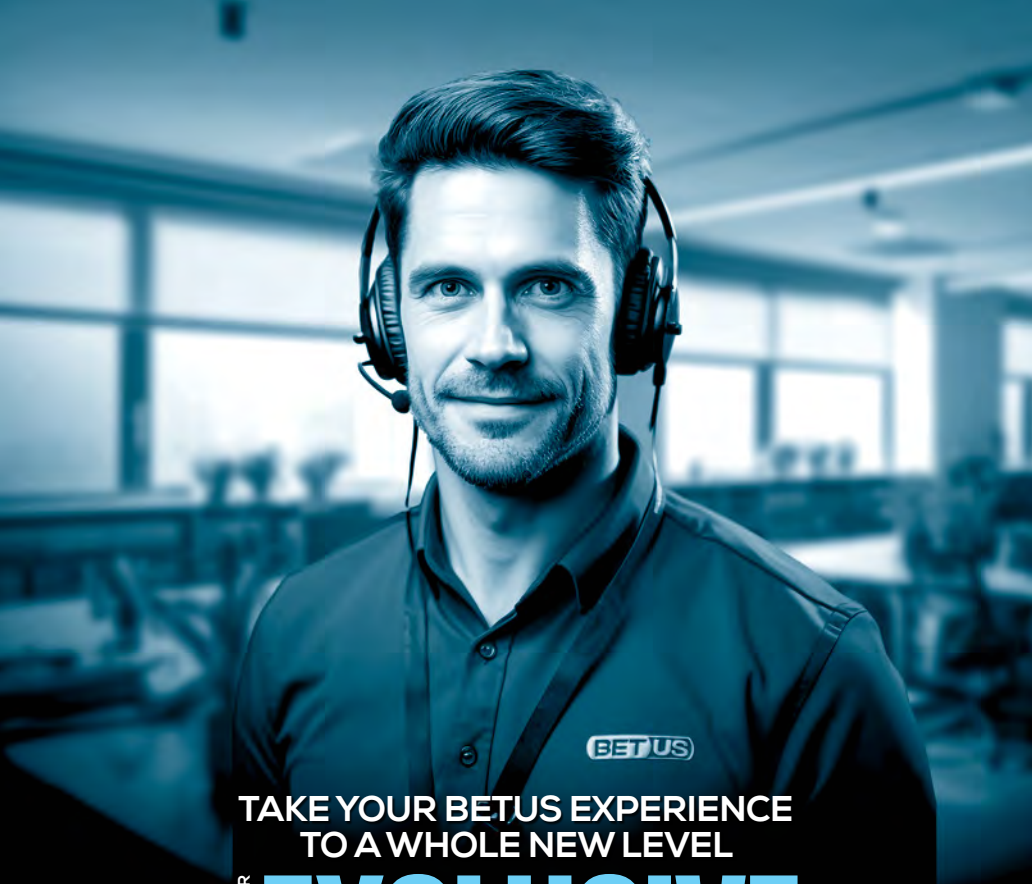

Nothing went right for the New Orleans Pelicans last season. Zion Williamson only played 30 games due to injury, Brandon Ingram played 18 games (before getting traded to the Toronto Raptors) and Dejounte Murray played 31. This led to the Pelicans having a 21-61 record, which was the second-worst in the Western Conference. New Orleans also had one of the worst offseasons in the NBA. They traded away CJ McCollum, fired general manager David Griffin and the only additions of note were Jordan Poole and Kevon Looney. To replace Griffin, they hired Joe Dumars as president of basketball operations, who hasn't worked for an NBA team since 2022. The Pelicans had so much promise in recent years, but it's starting to look like a sinking ship. They have a chance to be the worst team in the NBA this season. The only good news that comes with that is they'll be in the running for the No. 1 pick.

New York Knicks

The end of the season was disappointing, but it's safe to say that the New York Knicks are back. They made it to the Eastern Conference Finals for the first time since the 1999-00 season. Unfortunately, they couldn't overcome the Indiana Pacers, but they have to be feeling really good about the 2025-26 season. The Knicks didn't lose any key players this offseason, but they did decide to fire head coach Tom Thibodeau. While Thibodeau teams do usually have a ceiling, it's a big risk to fire a head coach who led the team to their best season in over two decades. Mike Brown was hired to replace him, who was also recently fired. Coaching is a concern, but the roster isn't. Karl-Anthony Towns fit in well with his new team, and Mikal Bridges was an impact player. Jalen Brunson finished 10th in MVP voting and put together another excellent playoff run. With so many teams in the Eastern Conference in disarray due to injuries, this could be the year the Knicks finally get back to the NBA Finals.

Oklahoma City Thunder

It wasn't a surprise that the Oklahoma City Thunder were awesome last season. What was a surprise was the fact that they were able to win a championship with such a young roster. The team has been headed in the right direction for years; they just needed a true superstar to emerge. Shai Gilgeous-Alexander is that player. After finishing second in the MVP race in 2023-24, Gilgeous-Alexander had an incredible 2024-25 season that saw him win the MVP and Finals MVP. Though the Thunder didn't make any big additions this offseason, they were able to retain Jaylin Williams while extending Gilgeous-Alexander and Chet Holmgren. The Thunder are the favorites to win the championship again this season, which shouldn't come as a surprise. They have a great young roster, the best general manager in the NBA (Sam Presti) and an excellent head coach. There hasn't been a back-to-back NBA champion since the Golden State Warriors in 2017 and 2018, but the Thunder have a chance to change that.

Orlando Magic

The Orlando Magic appeared to be a team on the rise. They won 47 games in 2023-24 and took the Cleveland Cavaliers to seven games in the first round of the playoffs. While they were able to make the playoffs this season, they only won 41 games and lost in five to the Boston Celtics in the playoffs. However, the Magic decided to be aggressive this offseason. They pulled off a blockbuster trade for Desmond Bane. They gave up a ton of draft capital to get him, but that shouldn't hurt them this season.

They were also able to extend star forward Paolo Banchero. With the Eastern Conference expected to be wide open this season, it makes sense that the Magic would swing a big trade. Banchero has superstar potential, and Bane can be a very good running mate. Franz Wagner is coming off a career year and is only 23. This is a young Magic team, but they have some very good pieces. If things go right, they have a chance to make some noise in the Eastern Conference.

Philadelphia 76ers

2024-25 was a season from hell for the Philadelphia 76ers. Joel Embiid was limited to 19 games, Paul George missed half the season, Tyrese Maxey wasn't healthy and promising rookie Jared McCain tore his meniscus. This led to them winning just 24 games, which was the third-worst in the Eastern Conference. The good news for the 76ers is that it's hard to imagine it getting any worse in 2025-26. The aforementioned four players should all be healthy at some point, even if some of them aren't ready at the start of the year. The 76ers didn't make any big moves outside of drafting V.J. Edgecombe with the No. 3 pick. If Edgecombe pans out, the future could be bright for Philadelphia. However, it's difficult to get a gauge of how good they can be this season. If Embiid and George are both able to play 60+ games and are healthy for the playoffs, they should be one of the better teams in the Eastern Conference, but that's a big if. For now, it's more likely that the 76ers have a limited ceiling.

Phoenix Suns

The Phoenix Suns took some big gambles on players like Kevin Durant and Bradley Beal in recent years, but they didn't pay off. Durant was traded to the Houston Rockets, while Beal was bought out and signed with the Los Angeles Clippers. Head coach Mike Budenholzer was fired, which means Jordan Ott will be their fourth head coach in four years. In the Durant trade, the Suns got Dillon Brooks and Jalen Green, who should be impact players. They also traded for Mark Williams. With Durant and Beal gone, Booker is clearly the No. 1 option on the team. This Phoenix roster isn't devoid of talent, but it's unlikely they can compete in a loaded Western Conference. Booker is very good, but he can't carry a team to a championship. This might be a good year to try and retool under a new head coach. The Suns have arguably been the most chaotic team in the NBA the last few years, so they need to have a normal season. That would be an upgrade over the previous two.

Portland Trail Blazers

The Portland Trail Blazers have been one of the NBA's worst teams, but finally showed signs of life in 2024-25. The team won 36 games and were close to being in the play-in tournament. It's been a struggle in recent years, but the Trail Blazers are heading in the right direction. It wasn't a huge offseason for Portland. Damian Lillard is back, but he won't be playing this year as he nurses an Achilles injury. They also traded for Jrue Holiday. Expectations are very low for the Trail Blazers.

Anfernee Simons was their leading scorer, but he was traded to the Boston Celtics. Scoot Henderson was highly touted coming out of college, but hasn't been much of an impact player. Shaedon Sharpe is a bright spot. The 22-year-old guard averaged 18.5 ppg last season. That said, there isn't too much to be excited about with this team. The young talent isn't great, and there isn't a true star on the roster until Lillard is healthy. This team's ceiling in 2025-26 is a play-in tournament bid.

Sacramento Kings

The Sacramento Kings' 2022-23 season appears to be an outlier. They were a team on the rise after making the playoffs for the first time in over a decade, but they followed that up by missing the postseason in back-to-back seasons. De'Aaron Fox was traded to the San Antonio Spurs, but they were able to replace him with Zach LaVine. The Kings weren't terrible in 2023-24. They finished with a 40-42 record, which earned them a spot in the play-in tournament that they lost. This team isn't without talent. Domantas Sabonis is an All-

Star-level player, LaVine is a strong scorer, DeMar DeRozan continues to play at a high level, and Malik Monk is a very good option off the bench. They also added Dennis Schroder in free agency. The problem facing them is that they don't have a true No. 1 star on the roster. In the star-studded Western Conference, that is a problem. They have enough talent to remain in the playoffs mix, but they will have a hard time staying out of the play-in tournament for the third season in a row.

San Antonio Spurs

For the first time in nearly three decades, the San Antonio Spurs are going into a season without Gregg Popovich on the sidelines. The legendary coach decided to finally step back and will serve in an advisory role. Mitch Johnson is set to replace Popovich, and this will be his first head coaching job. Luckily for him, he's got some amazing young talent to work with. Victor Wembanyama is already one of the best players in the NBA and should only get better. Stephon Castle was the Rookie of the Year last season, and they drafted Thomas Harper with the

No. 2 pick. That's not to mention that they traded for De'Aaron Fox during the season. Despite having some good talent, the Spurs only won 34 games last season. They are one of the best candidates to make a major leap in 2025-26. Popovich is a legend, but he hasn't been able to stay on the sideline consistently due to health issues. Johnson simply being available will help the young players. The Spurs are likely a year or two away from being real title contenders, but they might have the brightest future of any team in the NBA.

Toronto Raptors

The Toronto Raptors are no longer one of the most consistent teams in the Eastern Conference. They've missed the playoffs in three straight seasons and only won 30 games last year. The team made a big trade for Brandon Ingram during the season, but he didn't play a single game. They were able to extend him this offseason, so the hope is that he can return to All-Star form. Other than that, there's not much to be excited about with the Raptors. After 12 years, Toronto parted ways with president Masai Ujiri, who was instrumental in the team winning their first championship in 2019. Head coach Darko Rajaković might have one of the hottest seats in the NBA, so it's difficult to feel too good about their direction. Lottery pick Colin Murray-Boyles is one reason to be excited, but there's not much going for the Raptors these days. Unless they are able to land another star before the trade deadline, they'll be lucky to get into the play-in tournament this season.

Utah Jazz

The Utah Jazz did everything right in their effort to tank for Cooper Flagg. They won an NBA-worst 17 games, which gave them the best chance for the No. 1 pick. Unfortunately for them, the basketball gods don't look kindly on tanking, so the Jazz not only missed out on the top pick but fell to the No. 5 pick. They selected Ace Bailey, who is a promising player, but didn't want to go to Utah. That could end up being a headache. That said, the Jazz had a solid offseason. They made some trades that landed them Kevin Love, Jusuf Nurkić and Georges Niang. However, this isn't a team that's even close to competing. Lauri Markkanen is a stud, but he only averaged 19.0 ppg last season. They also lost Collin Sexton, Jordan Clarkson and John Collins this offseason. Utah is still focused on rebuilding, but their future could hinge on Bailey. If he's happy in Utah and lives up to the hype, the team could finally have a star to build around.

Washington Wizards

The Washington Wizards continue to be one of the worst teams in the NBA. After winning just 15 games in 2023-24, they won 18 games last season, which was the worst in the Eastern Conference. Jordan Poole and Kyle Kuzma are no longer with the team, but CJ McCollum and Cam Whitmore have joined. Despite having the second-worst record in the NBA, the Wizards got the No. 6 pick in the draft, which they used on Tre Johnson. 2024 No. 2 pick Alex

Sarr was decent as a rookie, but nothing special. There isn't too much to be excited about on this team. The young talent just isn't there, and there also isn't high-end veteran talent. Head coach Brian Keefe is going to have his work cut out for him, and he also can't be feeling too comfortable about his job status. Once again, the Wizards should be a lottery team. Perhaps they will finally be able to get the No. 1 overall pick for the first time since 2010.
